

A telecommunication system is described, which has a public network to which at least one terminal is coupled via an connecting device. The location of the connecting device is stored in the connecting device. The location of the connecting device is entered manually or determined automatically